

Ronald Jolly

Ronald “Ron” Jolly is the Vice President, Corporate Operations for IDA. He is responsible for ensuring the daily operations of IDA, partnering with corporate leadership to understand their goals and managing the directorates responsible for providing the resources staffers need to meet their objectives.

Prior to joining IDA in 2024, Ron served on the board of advisors for ThroughPut, Inc. Before that, he was the director of Mission Assurance at Northrop Grumman Aeronautics Systems, where he led the creation of the Talent Management/Development program for senior mission assurance managers.

Ron served in the U.S. Air Force where he held several leadership positions, including Director of Logistics, Engineering and Force Protection for U.S. Air Forces in Europe-Air Forces Africa. He retired as a brigadier general after more than 30 years.

Ron holds a master’s degree in management from Troy State University, a master’s degree in military operational art and science from the Air Command and Staff College, and a master’s degree in national security strategy from the National War College. Ron also holds a bachelor’s degree in industrial engineering and management from Oklahoma State University.
